

Flute Medicine

By

Jan Michael Looking Wolf

Written by

Steve Sheppard

For me the flute has to be one of the most spiritual instruments of all time, it can create a resonance so sweet and haunting, so tender, but poignant, and those words could accurately describe the latest Jan Michael Looking Wolf album Flute Medicine.

The light-hearted, but melodic piece called Verdi Harmony is but one arrangement of outstanding beauty you will sample. The multi instrumental nature of this album really adds a colourful depth to this marvellous release, just listen to my favourite song Raven Wind, and marvel at its mysterious, but magical nature.

Percussion is a vital ally of this album and on tracks like Jewel in the Lotus and Sacred Rain, that symbiosis between flute and drum can be heard in abundance.

Jan Michael Looking Wolf's supreme skill on flute cannot be questioned, just listen to Wolf Totem, a traditional offering, but one that you could journey with ease to the lair of the Wolf with, while Healing Light has that spine tingling haunting quality that is truly emotive and will most certainly move you.

Flute Medicine is just that, here we have an album of flute based music, layered with a multi instrumentational nature, which will be a panacea to cure all ills and ease the mind into a place of blissful tranquillity. This has to be a must buy album at all costs, one that will bring depths of sensitive beauty into your life.