Tim Neumark has released a charming new single entitled Yearning; this also has to be one of the finest examples of emotional ambient piano I have heard for simply ages.

One must also pay tribute to the art work of the release; its sun kissed hazy scene triggers many memories for me personally. The gentle almost timeless beginning works so beautifully with the picture, as we all have yearnings of one type or another. Here we may feel like time has flown past so quickly that we haven't truly appreciated each and every moment, and perhaps the yearning is to regain a sense of childlike innocence with the knowledge we have now accrued.

Whatever your thoughts about where this single takes is purely up to you, but in my view this is one of the best performances on piano by the artist I have heard since the release of Neumark's album Storm back in 2014, this is simply incredible and deeply moving.
