Apart from the stunning artwork that comes with this new offering, here is a composition bathed a time past, this memory filled opus is delightfully performed on piano by number one artist Karen Biehl and with the smoothness and flair of a natural entertainer.

As It Was, Ages Hence has a soft string section within its construction and an almost dance ethic can be found here, perhaps of two lovers dancing arm in arm through the forest. From the moment this track plays a story unfurls and is easily an offering that I could see fitting into a movie or television segment.

Karen Biehl has raised the bar with each and every composition she has created and now with this single, I see her standing within her genre elevated even further, this is a single of true class and panache.
